Irish, who made these attacks."

If—as some have understood it—this passage was meant to refer to the Catholic Bishop and Priests of this city, I beg respectfully, but most distinctly and earnestly to deny the truth of the injurious insinuation conveyed by this language. I have myself been, until the last day or two, confined to my room for two weeks by illness, and I have the most positive information that none of the Catholic clergy of this city have had any agency, direct or indirect, in bringing about the recent lamentable outrages, which no one deplores more than we do. Our voice has been uniformly for peace. We have not even in any uniformly for peace. We have not even in any way interfered in the late election, being overwhelmed with laborious duties in a different sphere altogether. I venture also to appeal to the sense of justice and fairness manifested for so many years by the editor of the Journal and to ask him to correct this impression so injurious to ask him to correct this impression so injurious to us, if such was the meaning of the passage—which I would be loath to believe.

To all whom the influence of my voice can in any way reach, I beg to say that I entreat them, in the name of Jesus Christ, the God of Peace, to abstain from all violence, to remain quietly at home or attending to their business, to keep away from all excited assemblies, and if they think they have been injured to return good for evil, and to pray for those who have wronged them. I appeal to them and to the world whether this as not been always the tenor of my instructions to them, both public and private, and also that of all the Catholic clergy.

I have too high an opinion of my fellow-citi-zens of every class to believe for a moment that the threats which have been made by some will be carried out. I entreat all to pause and reflect, to commit no violence which they would regret in their cooler moments, to believe no idle ru-mors, and to cultivate that peace and love which are the characteristics of the religion of Christ. We are to remain on earth but a few years; let us not add to the necessary ills of life those more awful ones of civil feuds and bloody strife. M. J. SPALDING. Louisville, August 7, 1855.

The Journal publishes this card, accompanying it with the following remarks: We publish with pleasure Bishop Spalding's card to the public. We have not, in aught we have written, intended to make any imputation upon him. We have not for one moment suspected him of instigating men to riot and blood-shed. We have felt grateful to him for the services he rendered unwards of a year ago in allaysnen. We have left grateful to him for the ser-vices he rendered upwards of a year ago in allay-ing public excitement to the extent of his influ-ence, when our own property was thought to be in danger from a mob, and we have never thought him otherwise than as the friend of law and order.

Literary Curiosities at the Royal Library A correspondent of the Boston Traveller, writing from Berlin, Prussia, July 2d, 1855, says of the Royal Library and its literary curiosities: I wish to speak in this letter somewhat at length of this splendid library, and there are three things to which I will call the reader's attention—the arrangement and extent of the rooms which contain it, the collection of curiosities, and the admirable regulations which govern the taking out of books.

It is unquestionably one of the finest libraries

The Curtis Feck was crowded with passengers, some 400 in number, who were permitted to land after the health officer had done his duty. Many of them, in consequence of the crowded state of the hotels, went on through by the cars going North. Passengers say that all who could leave norfolk were leaving.

In addition to the list of dead published, we add the names of Master William Edward Camp, aged 18, and Miss Amelia Lewis, aged 15.

It is unquestionably one of the finest libraries It is unquestionably one of the finest libraries in Europe. Ten years ago it contained over 500,000 volumes, and the present number is not thought to be much, if any, under 600,000. The building itself is one of the two prominent ones which date from the time of Frederick the Great. The other is the University. Frederick seems to have been a Prince of great taste. He The other is the University. Frederick seems not to have been a Prince of great taste. He took a chest of drawers as his model in building this library. The front is elaborately ornament-ed with pillars of the Corinthian order, but the resemblance to the object of Frederick's whim is

The books are not contained in one hall, but in an extensive suite of rooms. These rooms are filled with racks for the books, and the general subject is placed in conspicuous letters at the top citement prevails in consequ Books of all langua are thus brought into the closest contact, and the scholar of a particular science has but to resort to that part of the library where his favorite branch is represented, and he is certain to find the best works, in whatever language published. It is a great misfortune that so fine a library has catalogue. It is supposed to be unneeded; but one who has been accustomed to se ect from a well-arranged catalogue, and to refresh his memory by consulting its pages instead of cudeavoring to call up from his own mind the books of which he is in need, soon misses this valuable auxiliary.

I stood some time at the place where the placard America showed the particular representa-tion which the United States makes to this greacollection. There were many familiar names there, but I must say it, in a state of the utmost confusion as to subject matter. The general ignorance of the English language which prevails here accounts for it. A scientific treatise finds its proper place with certainty because a title containing words of Latin origin is readily understood, but works of a more popular character are thrown together with crimination. In a library, one of the chief excellencies is the generally systematic arrangement of its books; Loring's Hundred Orators finds itself next to the Lamplighter, and Major Downing's Letters and the Boston School Reports are in an agreeable contiguity.

The literary curiosities are contained in a separate room. I remarked about fifteen of special interest; these were contained in about five cases, and are admirably arranged for inspection. I will give a brief summary of the contents. The first contained a collection of manuscript writings from some of the most distinguished men whom Germany has produced; from Gothe, Leibnizt, Frederick the Great, Klopstock, Lessing, Wilhelm von Humboldt, Frederick Schlegel, and a few others. There were three specimens from Gothe's pen; very indistinct, but yet written, I should judge, with some care. Corrections were frequent; in one place the word had been twice corrected. Frederick apparently wrote in great haste; the signature, however, was more carefully executed. Humboldt wrote a fine hand, perfectly free from blots and without corrections. Lessing's was much the same, but corrected in many places. Klopstock wrote with a trembling hand, and his manuscript is read with great difficulty.

In another case are curiosities of a very different nature. Here are the Bible and the prayer-book of Charles the First; the former was placed to his lips at the moment before his execution. How it came into the possession of the Prussian government I do not know. The Bible is of very npretending appearance, but the prayer-book is ery beautifully bound—its cover is of tortoise very beautifully bound—its cover is of tortoise shell, secured by massive gold clasps. Luther's Hebrew Bible, and his own German translation, are here, too, and close by a sheet from the reformer's pen. The writing is bold and free. In the next case, to make a strong contrast, is one the next case, to make a strong contrast, is one of Tetzel's famous indulgences, and a letter from that great man, Ignatius Loyola, the founder of the order of Jesus. Other objects of interest are, Zwingli's Bible, a specimen of Melancthon's hand writing, a very old copy of the Koran, and a beautiful series of portraits of the leading reformers, from the pencil of Louis Cranach. For Luther's own copy of the Old Testament the English government has offered $100,000. In another room are to be seen two philosophi-In another room are to be seen two philosophi quickly; the uniformity of the slips, in their general appearance, enables the librarians to look them rapidly over, and see whether the books have been retained beyond the proper time. The size of the Royal Library Berlin has this disadvantage, that it is necessary to deposit one's slip in a box, provided for the purpose, at least two hours before receiving his book, but of course no one thinks of waiting. He calls for his book by exhibiting a card, always in his possession, con-taining his name and that of his surety.

They are the first air-pump and the Magdeburg hemispheres, both invented by Otto Guerike. The air-pump is an odd looking contrivance, with not the slightest resemblance to the elegant double harrelled ones of these days. Its single harrel is perpendicular, and is supported by a barrel is perpendicular, and is supported by a tripod. The handle is long and ungainly, but it must have been an effective machine, from the ount which is given of the results of its action. Every person who has studied natural philosophy in our schools, will remember that it required twenty horses to draw them apart. The sphere which they together form is about two feet in diameter, This is the only public library in Berlin. All persons are allowed to avail themselve.

The Yellow Fever in Norfolk and Ports-

The report of the Norfolk Sanitary Committee, for the twenty-four hours ending Thursday, at 2 p. m., shows that there were during that time seven new cases in the city, and two deaths—all except one from the heretofore infected district. In the hospital there were four cases and one death.

On Thursday night, "Barry's Row," the infective district, was fired and burned. New attempt was made to stop the flames. The Richmond Dispatch says:

The last named gentleman, our informant says, delivered an eloquent and impressive prayer, beseeching the Great Ruler to stay the depopulation of the town, the attendance was large. There were forty cases of fever in the Naval Hospital, and some of the patients dying. The fever in Portsmouth was increasing. Messrs. R. H. Parker and Wm. B. "The number of deaths by fever since Monday have been as follows: Tuesday 9, Wednesday 8, Thursday 7, Friday 7. The number of new cases are not quite so numerous as they have been, and we understand they seem to be of a milder form, yielding more readily to the treatment of the physicians. A large portion of the population have left town, and others are going. Great exto land there, to provide for the safety of them-selves and families, and if they persist in the course they have adopted, destruction to public property has been threatened. Great indignation exists on account of a rumor that some of our citizens at Magnolia Springs have organized themselves into a board of health to prevent others from stopping there. It is with great difficulty that persons can now get away, as some of the usual modes of communication have been cut off, and many towns have taken measures to prohibit persons from our community to come among them. end of all this we are enabled to predict.

The American Reaper.

Of McCormick was the subject of great admira ion the middle of last month at Grignon, near Verseilles, where the French Government has an mperial Institution for the education and instrucion of young farmers. It is a very extensive farm of 1,100 acres connected with many stables, barns and outhouses. The ancient chateau serves for lecture rooms and ledgings. The live stock amounts to a hundred head of cattle, a thousand sheep, draught horses and oxen, etc. t has all the requisite accommodations and arrangements for such an institution. Mr. Bella, unior, the director, is assisted by seven professors, overseers and engineers, to instruct the pupils, about 70 in number, theoretically and practically, A correspondent of the Paris American writes from this school July 12, as follows: I have no time to say more about this interesting place, and its obliging and highly qualified director, having another subject to treat of, viz: McCormick's Reaping and Moreing Machine. This ingenious contrivance, which has already astonished the people of Europe, has been brought here to the Universal Exhibition, by Mr. Mc-Kenzie, McCormick's agent. Permission was obtained to try it at this place. The trial came off on the 11th instant, in a fine heavy piece of clover, and the result was perfect. The director invited several gentlemen from Paris and from the neighborhood, who with the professors and pupils of the school, made quite a crowd to witness the operation. The horses started at a brisk pace, and the the horses started at a brisk pace, and the cutter went into the clover like a warm knife into butter. The reel turned the clover beautifully over, and laid it in an even swath behind the machine as fast as the horses could walk. When they turned the swath from the stubble and saw how even and close it was cut to the ground, an involuntary hurran burst from all the witnesses. The machine went on, followed by the whole crowd, round the field, and it cut the laying as well as the standing clover, to the astonishm and satisfaction of every one. The man who perfectly from the start. I am not of an enthusi astic anture, but I must confers I ran after it like the rest, wondering all the time at its perfect

It was curious to see the old French farmers running and jumping after the Mower, turning now and then the cut clover, examining the stubble, gesticulating and exclaiming all the while: "marveileur, parfait, magnifique," and applauding this ingenious contrivance as they would have done one of their favorite actors. The director explained very clearly the advantages of this unique invention, praised its great simplicity, and declared himself fully convinced of its great practical utility and superiority over all other

Forty-six of the citizens of the place have also died from the disease. Further advices from Fort Riley confirm the Judge Johnson, in view of the highly excited state of the public mind, and in order that ample time might be given the accused to obtain testimony, has postponed the examination until Thursday.

The method of registering the books which are taken out has pleased me much, and it seems to be capable of general application. An Abolition Prayer. Within the past week, we have had an abolition preacher in town from abroad-one Rev. Ichabod Codding, who trampled the American flag under his feet, and, on Sunday last, he delivered an abolition sermon in one of the churches of this city. When he finished his sermon, he offered up a prayer, which, we are told, was very nearly as follows, and which, at its conclusion, was heartily responded to by an enthusiastic "Amen!" from every abolitionist present:

"O, Lord, whatever is, is wrong. Thou hast established or permitted Slavery on earth, yea, even the Bible sanctions distinctions among men. Thou hast permitted the strong to rule the weak, the intelligent to govern the ignorant. Thou hast created big fishes, and allowed them to eat up the smaller ones. Thou doet allow the lion up the smaller ones. Thou dost allow the lion and the tiger to feed on smaller animals, and the eagles and the hawks to devour little innocess dangerously ill. There are a number of cases among the servants.

In Portsmouth on Wednesday religious services were held in the Baptist and Methodist churches.

> and underground railroads without number, that the minds of men may, by such means, become excited to action—without action nothing can be accomplished. Aid us then, O Lord, in accomplishing the great and good work, although it may lead to revolution and the trampling under foot the flag of the country and the laws and Constitution of the land. Let sudden and imediate emancipation take place, let the results be what they may—be it treason and the shedding of blood, let it be done, for the curse of slavery is > the cause of all the sin and evil in the world.

> "O, Lord, we do not desire Thee to remember the sins that are against us, but we desire to draw thy special attention to the sins of the Slave--We desire the sins of ourselves and others of like faith, put off until the final day when all will be fully judged and awarded according to their merits; but O Lord, for our sake do not put off the punishment due to the Slave-holders—if their sins are not punished promptly they might escape thy remembrance altogether.
> In conclusion, wilt Thou hear our prayers, and as we are opposed to all distinctions and to all as we are opposed to all distinctions, and to all rulers and Kings, and as Thou art the greatest of all Kings, and far above us, wilt Thou—for the sake of there being no distinction—make us equal to Thyself, in wisdom, in power, and in glory. These things we modestly ask for ourselves that we may have cause to praise Thee and honor Thy name—Amen!"

Sick Headache Remedy .- A remedy for the sick headache, which has been recently offered to the public, is attracting great attention, not only by reason of the very satisfactory testimonials to its efficacy which have been volunteered by many who have been benefited by it, but also because there are so great a number of people who are afflicted with the distressing complaint, for which no medicine has before been made public. Dr. Eastman, who discovered the efficacy of his "remedy," is a physician in this city, in high standing, with a large practice. He is a physician in whom great confidence is placed; and we do not wonder that his remedy for a very common disease, which has been so long needed, has attracted the attention of all sufferers from headache who have heard of it. From our own knowledge of Dr. Eastman's character and practice, we have no doubt that the medicine deserves the favor it receives, and that it will prove to be a great benefit to all who may give it a trial.—Lynn News, December 23, 1853.

the time intervening between these two now-a-days, with politicians, who, we presume, have not got more piety than is necessary to facilitate them on their journey heaven-ward!

When Gavazzi was in this city, about two years ago, we were among his auditors, but cannot say we were particularly edified; as we were capable of comprehending, owing to his broken English, not more than half he said; and were not admirers of his peculiar style of oratory; it being of the mouthing, grimacing, stamp-foot, sawing-the-airwith the arms, now a loud sentence and then a low one, subsiding to a whisper, kind of elecution. There could not have been more than thirty, or perhaps forty persons, present on that occasion, some of whom applauded the Italian, as, at the end of a sentence, occasionally, he strutted on the stage, gracefully wrapping around himself his cross adorned velvet robe.

The city authorities, apprehending a roy ordered out all the day and night police forces, who promptly repaired to Carusi's saloon, ready to suppress the first indication of a mobocratic spirit; but, be it spoken to the credit of our city, there was no demonstration of that kind whatsoever; in fact, as we have already stated, there were not more than thirty, perhaps forty, persons present, and among them we recognised some with big sticks-the emblems of their constabulary authority-in other words, the officers, to preserve the public peace, which was not in the least danger of being disturbed!

Public Schools -- Knownothingism .- At recent meeting of the board of trustees of the public schools, all the teachers, with but two exceptions-one a Protestant, and the other a Roman Catholic-were re-elected, to serve during the present year.

We are gratified with this result, both on acco of the competency of the instructors and because the board are, apparently, indisposed to proscribe any one on account of his or her preference for the Roman Catholic Church; an event which was apprehended, in view of the bitterness which distinguishes the membership of the Knownothing order, of which the school trustees are a part, toward that system of religion. Let City Fathers stoop so low in political filth as to turn even uightmen" out of their odoriferous offices, but let not the school trustees make the teachers of youth the objects of their uncharitable attacks. Were such a course pursued, the system of public schools would lose the good name which it has acquired, and sink into deserved contempt. Church forms, and matters of doctrine and faith should be carefully excluded from the public "dayschools," as a knowledge of them can be acquired in the "Sunday schools" attached to the several Churches, of the various distinct denominations.

Camp-meetings.-The Montgomery county atup-meeting, about fifteeen miles from Washngton, will commence on Friday; and a week thereafter, there will be one on the Bladensburg circuit. From the preparations in certain parts of the city to attend those religious gatherings, we are led to the belief that the day when camp-meetings shall be among the things that were, is far DROSPECTUS .- SOUTHERN CONSERvative Magazine.—When new aspirants for popular favor are announced, the public have a right to demand the grounds upon which such show of title to their patronage is made. In acknowledgment of this, we trace the customs parties in the avowal of principles; of religiou sects, in the promulgation of creeds; and of per sects, in the promulgation of creeds; and of per sons in all pursuits of life, dependent upon the public for success, in their preparatory expositions of plans and purposes. The customs thus origin-ating, though sometimes abused, are useful and proper, and should not be discarded. And when, in obedience to custom, new plans are proposed, those approving ought not to withhold their encouragement, as too many do, until they see the success is sure, for their aid may be needed to secure it. Such a foolish policy as this jeopar dizes the plan they approve, and hastens its failure it has defeated many important enterprizes, and has deprived the country of good and useful works. If a new proposition of any kind is approved by the public, the support of those approving is of right expected, their approval being solicited only in the view that their more substantial aid will not be withheld.

BRIEF OUTLINE OF THE PLAN OF THE PROPOSED PERIODICAL.

THE SOUTHERN CONSERVATIVE MAGAZINE W. occupy grounds but little cultivated by American magazinists. It is believed that a field is open for a periodical of a new and, in some respects, higher order than has been aimed at in our maga aim, we announce the Southern Conservative Magazine.
The new magazine will be national and sectional; claiming no merit by virtue of its es-tablishment in the South, but aiming at a higher usefulness and a more general acceptability. It will be Protestant, but not sectarian; opposin religious bigotry or intollerance on the one side, and infidelity on the other laboring in its teachings to advance a closer union between the several ranches of the great family of the church. It will be political, but liberal; owing no slavisl allegiance to parties or politicians, it will advocate measures, not men, and will labor only for the uccess of principles.

It will be progressive, yet sternly opposed the reckless spirit of innovation so rife in the country-aiming to elevate and advance, not depress; to reform and improve, not to destroy belong not, par excellence, to any favored people, but are the common right of all It will be the organ of pure conservation. It will encourage a high-toned literature, and defend pure morals in all the social relations of And it will number in its corps of regular con tributors some of the ablest political and literary writers of the country.

The magazine will be printed on the finest quality of paper, with new type, and in a plain but superior style. Each number will contain not less than 50 large octavo pages, made up of original articles, con-tributed and editorial—reviews, political and scientific essays, romances, poetry, &c. We promise much for the new magazine, and we intend to perform it all, and more, if the reading public will give the enterprise a liberal en TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

The Southern Conservative Magazine will b issued, the first of each month, from the office of publication, Nashville or Knoxville, Tennessee, and will be furnished to suscribers at four dollars a year, or three dollars if paid punctually in advance. Publication will be commenced the 1st day of January, 1856. Address orders to the editor and proprietor.

TO LOVERS OF THE FRENCH LANGUAGE TU LOVERS OF THE FRENCH LANGUAGE
THE advertiser, a Frenchman and graduate of the Polytechnic School of Paris, respectfully offe, s his services as a teacher of his native tongue to Schools, Classes, and Private Pupils of this city and vicinity. The system he follows to facilitate the acquisition of the French Language, unites in due proportion theory and practice; by which are avoided the difficulties the student often meets with a pursuing one of the many theoretical grammars, not sufficiently showing the idiomatical part of the language, or a practical one, in which the necessary grammatical rules, if not entirely, at least far too much, are neglected. In following these theoretical grammages are the student of the language of the language of the language. neglec ed. In following these theoretical grammars, the student must have experienced that after having devoted a long time to the mere memorizing of sentences, he find himself in possession of a number of set phrases, valuable it is true, but from which, destinite of landmarks, the slightest deviation must lead him into unknown regions.

that the pupil, in adopting his method, may, with a little effort, after a course of forty eight lessens, understand and speak the French, and find the as sistance of a teacher not necessary in the further presecution of the studies of that language.
